Tuxton's Texas Tornado

February 2010 (Austin, TX) – Tuxton China's Regional Sales Manager, Rose Iwasaki, is now based in Central Texas. According to Bill Burden, President, this highly anticipated move facilitates "improved support and service to our customers in the surrounding area" as the company continues to expand its presence throughout the Central region. Tuxton strongly believes their customers will benefit from Tuxton's quality-oriented product line, including the new long anticipated high-alumina ceramic dinnerware line: ALUMATUX.

Rose recently relocated with her seven-month old son and loving husband, and is enjoying her new home away from the West Coast. Rose stated that she is "excited for the new opportunities that may arise" with her new location and has already begun to call on customers in the area. With years of extensive experience working with dealer networks and multi-unit operators, Rose has developed many valuable relationships since joining the Tuxton family in 2004.

This new satellite location has the full support and backing of the Tuxton Team, headquartered in Walnut, California. The company plans to institute special incentive programs and personalized training sessions that should help support Rose's Texas Tornado campaign. Tuxton is taking the Central region by storm!
